Artist Statement

Over the course of my practice I have learned to pair my background as a metalsmith with my experience in architectural design and digital fabrication. This has led to an ongoing dialogue within my work between intuitive making and digital design. My goal is always to create experience through my work rather than tell stories. I hope that in viewing my work people will see something new to them and perhaps alter the way they look at the world around them, even if only a little. I like the idea that each viewer takes ownership of my work by way of having their own subjective experience, rather than insisting that there is a right way to think or feel about it. By experiencing pieces in this way, the viewer becomes a collaborator and can insert part of themselves into their experience and memory of the sculpture.
